3. Read the following passage, then answer the questions:

Water is one of our planet's most precious resources, yet it is often taken for granted. Every day, we use water for drinking, cooking, cleaning, and growing our food. However, many regions around the world face water shortages, making it crucial for everyone to understand the importance of conservation.

Saving water is not difficult. Simple habits can make a big difference. For example, turning off the tap while brushing your teeth can save many liters of water each day. Taking shorter showers and fixing leaking pipes promptly are also effective ways to reduce waste. Furthermore, collecting rainwater to water plants is an excellent method for gardeners.

The benefits of conserving water are extensive. It helps to preserve the environment by protecting lakes and rivers, ensures there is enough water for future generations, and reduces the energy required to process and deliver water to our homes. This, in turn, can lower our utility bills. By being mindful of our water use, we contribute to a more sustainable world. Every drop truly counts.

Choose the correct answer from a, b, c, or d:

1 What is the main idea of the passage?

a) Water is only used for drinking.

b) Saving water is easy and essential for our future.

c) Water shortages are not a serious problem.

d) Only gardeners need to save water.

3. Read the following passage, then answer the questions:

In today's world, energy plays an important role in our daily lives. We need it to cook food, light our homes, and run machines. For many years, people have depended on oil, coal, and gas. These sources give us power, but they also pollute the air and increase global warming.

Because of these problems, many countries are turning to renewable energy. This means using natural resources that will not run out, such as the sun, the wind, and water. Solar panels change sunlight into electricity. Wind turbines use the power of the wind to make energy. Dams and rivers can also produce electricity through water power.

Renewable energy has many advantages. It is clean, safe, and helps reduce pollution. It also creates jobs in new industries. However, there are some challenges. For example, solar energy cannot be used at night or on cloudy days, and wind energy is not possible without strong winds.

Even with these limits, experts believe renewable energy is the future. It will help protect the environment and make sure we do not run out of resources. If countries invest in renewable energy now, future generations will live in a safer, cleaner world.

Choose the correct answer from a, b, c, or d:

3. Read the following passage, then answer the questions:

Health is one of the most valuable things a person can have. To stay healthy, people need to eat balanced food, exercise regularly, and get enough sleep. A balanced diet includes fruits, vegetables, grains, proteins, and a small amount of fats. Junk food may taste good, but it often contains too much sugar, salt, and oil. Eating it too often can lead to serious health problems such as obesity and heart disease.

Exercise is also very important. Activities like walking, running, and swimming help the body stay strong and give people more energy. Exercise also helps the mind, because it reduces stress and makes people feel happier. Doctors usually recommend at least 30 minutes of exercise most days of the week.

Sleep is another key to good health. Without enough rest, the body and mind become weak. People who do not sleep well may find it hard to concentrate in school or at work.

In conclusion, health depends on simple daily habits. If people eat wisely, move their bodies, and rest properly, they can enjoy long and active lives.

Choose the correct answer from a, b, c, or d:

1 The main idea of the passage is that health depends on ..... .

3. Read the following passage, then answer the questions:

Last Friday, Amal and her classmates joined a community clean-up day. Early in the morning, they met at the park entrance with gloves, bags, and tools. The park, once full of green grass and flowers, looked untidy because of litter and broken benches. Amal felt sad seeing it in such a state.

Their teacher, Mr. Karim, encouraged everyone: "When we work together, we can make a difference." The students were divided into groups. Some picked up plastic bottles, while others painted the old benches. Amal and her friend Lina planted small trees near the playground.

As they worked, passersby stopped to thank them. One old man said, "You remind me of when I was young. We also cared for our city." His words gave the students confidence and energy. By noon, the park looked transformed. The grass was clear of trash, the benches shone with fresh paint, and new saplings stood proudly in the soil.

At the end, Amal smiled. She was tired but proud. She realized that helping the community was not only about cleaning; it was about responsibility, teamwork, and respect. That evening, she wrote in her diary: "Today I learned that even small efforts can bring big changes."

3. Read the following passage, then answer the questions:

Often, we believe that to make a difference in the world, we need to do something grand. However, small, simple acts of kindness can have a powerful impact on others and create a positive atmosphere in a community. A smile to a stranger, helping an elderly person carry their groceries, or thanking a bus driver might seem insignificant, but these gestures can brighten someone's entire day.

Consider a student who is having a difficult morning. A friend who notices this and offers a listening ear or a word of encouragement can change the course of that student's day. This simple support can reduce their stress and make them feel valued. Kindness is like a ripple in water; a single good deed can inspire the recipient to be kind to someone else, spreading positivity far and wide.

Furthermore, being kind is not only beneficial for the receiver but also for the person who performs the act. Studies show that helping others releases chemicals in the brain that make us feel happy and reduce our own stress. Therefore, kindness is a two-way street that improves the well-being of everyone involved. By consciously choosing to be kind, we contribute to building a more compassionate and connected society, one small gesture at a time.
